For onracives, we side with those who declare the expediency of the movement. Those who declare its inexpediency support their declaration by no reason which conception of the time in which we live nd of the work we have to do. If a convention is held, they assert, it will furnish capital to the radicals; moreover, they add, it is too soon to arrange the details of the Presidential campaign. And this is the substance of what they say. It does not touch the point. Nobody wants the onvention to meddle with the Presidental to the radicals. a cause that cannot bear the testimony of its friends must be either very weak in itself or very unfortunate in its friends, and in either event could not be safely asserted at any time. The objection proves too much.

Those who oppose the convention mis onceive its purpose, which is not the promulgation of a platform or the nominan of a ticket or the taking of any step ooking to either, but a solemn demonstraon against the revolutionary action of Congress. This and nothing more. The movement, so far as we know, was first suggested by a Democratic inceting in this city, the snggestion having been couched in these words: "Resolved. That we view with horror the revolutionary designs of the minority now in power in Congress at Washington, and that in view of these dangers we urgently recommend the nceting of a National Democratic Consention in Louisville at an early period." A few weeks afterward, the State Convention ot the Democracy of Connecticut responded to this suggestion in the following terms; Resolved. That, after solumn deliberation, it is the opinion of this Convention. as suggested by our conservative brethren of Kentneky, that a convention of the Democracy and all Constitutional Union OLLOW-WARE of all descrip a such as men of the thirty six States should be called without delay by the National Dem-March next, to advise and counsel upon the great questions that now agitate the public mind, to protest against the of the original draught. Fould-Reconstruction of the Cabinet-Appearance of Ministers in the Corps Legislatif, Editors Louisville Journal: · Parts, Tuesday, Jan. 22, 1577. Napoleon III. has roused us from the state of political lethargy in which we trampet tongued utterances for which the reign has been so remarkable. He love people least expect it, to go ahead by one of those spismodic jerks or bounds, which create a "sensation," and appeal with irresistible force to the imaginations of his changes are generally preceded by and are the result of long popular agitation or party struggles. In France they are coups delator coups de theatre on the part of the Executive, which accords them by its own sovereign will and pleasure and right of initiative, and with as much startling effect as possible. What a curious mixture of liberal and despotic ideas and measures are jumbled together in the present manifestation of the volonte invarials constill present in the present manifestation of the volonte invarials. riale, von will perceive at a glauce by he list of themes which I have placed at he head of this letter. But to speak more in detail of the imrtant events which have taken place, ward the end of last week rumors grew anding. At the ball of the Inneries, on the Ioth, the conversation in political cireles (not amongst those who go there only o dance and cat ices) turned almost enirely upon this subject. Still people were neredulous, because the same runners (as nentioned) had prevailed in the autumn and been suffered to die away again with out coming to anything. This time, how er, the event has been very different nd on Sunday morning there appeared the Moniteur a letter from the Emperor the Minister of State, making sweeping changes in the machinery of the Government by the stroke of a pen, followed by fame as in numbers, best understood decree for carrying them into effect, a with a notice that "all the ministers I tendered their resignations." For text of the above important documents I must refer you to other sources, as they are too lengthy for me to insert here. The are indoubtedly the suppression of the address and the abrogation of the celebrated decree of the 17th of February 1852, placing the press under the system of arbitrary "warnings" and suppressions. Why the Emperor has delayed the an-

use of M. Thiers and elsewhere, at which it was decided that the military organiza-tion bill should be made the grand cheval de bataille against the Government. Sur-ing appeals to the masses on this su' Favre and others; and so utterly unpopu lar is the measure that these appe believe that this and similar reflections precipitated the action of the Government at the last momeut, and determined the saries by a stroke of policy. He wo lity and failure to accomplish its object, and substitute a right of interpella- | pencd. tion by which he could muzzle a fac-tious minority by the aid of an imperial-ist majority. There is good reason to be-lieve that this object has been the main-

spring of the proposed changes. The covernment has announced its readiness to admit at once of "interpellations" on ts "foreign" policy; but this is evidently by done with a view to provoke discus-tion on that head, and so discreet the attention of the country from "internal questions. The abolition of "warnings" is an improvement, but we must wait and see the new law on the press before we can merse importance if intended to be permanent. M. Fould has retired from the management of the finances. All the ministers resigned, but the majority of them have been reappointed. M. Fould's resignation, on the contrary is "accepted, and M. The project which has been formed chiefly through the intervention of Colonel Norton, New York and U. S. Commissioner to the Exhibition, for providing suitable accommodation, on reasonable terms, for the less wealthy classes of Americans, artisans, overseers, and others, is, I am glad to think, in a fair way of being realized. Ground has been obtained on a suitable site close adjoining the Champs de Mars, satisfactory offers have been sent in hy contractors, and plane of the build. n by contractors, and plans of the build-ng arranged. I have seen one of the atter, capable of affording sleeping accommodation to about 2,000 persons, with a spacious restaurant on the ground floor Persons can there rent either a small separate chamier, or a party travelling company can occupy one spacious sleep-ing-room, with eight or ten beds in it, barrack-tashion. I cannot speak with any certainty yet as to charges, but I under-stand that the scale will be so regulated, if possible, by arrangement with four transutlantic and railway companies, as to bring the expense of the whole trip between New York and Paris and back including the necessary sojourn in the latter capital, within $300. I shall take care, however, to keep you au courante with the progress of a scheme which may prove beneficial to so many thousands of the industrial classes in the United States.

HEARTREXDING ACCIDENT.

Four Persons Drowned in the River at Detroit - Perils of Crossing on the Ice.

From the Detroit Press, Feb. 2d 1 Another of those dreadf. I accidents which almost yearly occur, owing to a to susceptible opinion of the strength of the ice on the river, occurred ou Thursday night. It is considered, sometimes, when a bridge is tormed within the city limits, that above and below all is correct, sound, or reliable, and that the ice can be depended upon. This may possibly be a correct interpretation at times, but, at others, woe-fully a mistaken one.

There is, perhaps, no current as fickle as that in the Detroit river. It sweeps in a broad sheet from the St. Clair lake into the comparatively narrow channel, and thence in a beautiful current to Lak - Eric mean in winter, and so far as ice is c n cerued. To trust to its security when it can only be partially icebound is placing a hopeful reliance upon a reed, liable to be shivered at any time. Venturesome spirits, however, often make the way, and confident copyists follow them. From this a most terrible accident has hap-

A mile or two below the Fort the ice had formed a "jum," and so completely was it held together that constant communicabeen so much landed territory, liable to be time being, and the communication be-tween the two countries was as frequent as that of any ordinary business on either

The treacherons current, however, calls upon us to tell a melancholy tale. Sweeping in its strength and broadness around the curves, it wore the ice thin, and while the "surface indications" were the same as ever, the track had a hypocritical sub-stance, which compels us to record a melancholly accident.

A Canadian Frenchman, named Gonyeaux, with his wife and three children, cume across to this city to purchase some goods, or. as has been stated, to relieve some property from a liability upon it, the papers of which were in the circuit court. Having satisfied the clerk of the gennineness of his intentions, he started for home, with his tamily. They took the Fort street route as far as the street railway directed them from where they directed. them, from whence they diverged on to the river road. Arriving at the first avenue below the Riverside House, they ventured upon the ice, and here, one of the little girls, who escaped, states a most singular circumstance. She says that the horse, whip to proceed. Gonyeaux was partially intoxicated, and urged him on. His wife was sitting by his side, and remarked that something might be the matter, or the horse would not act so. A liberal application of the whit was her only attractions. cation of the whip was her only answer, and the animal, whose instinct told him of the danger ahead, sprung forward beneath the smart, only to find a watery grave. While nervously trotting and feeling his way across the icc, the girl states that he frequently neighed, bolted, and refused to proceed. The whip, however, compelled him forward, and unwillingly he proceeded. When within a hundred yards of the Canada shore, where the water sweeps in a rapid current, the horse sambled and the ice gave way beneath him. A step forward and he was floundering among broken pieces of ice; a lung and the o copants of the sleigh were with him in the water. The struggle was but for a ment. The current carried the horse by nenth the ice, and with a wild, despairing skrick, father, mother, and two of their children were swallowed up in the watery temb. The other grl, Marie, had a most miraculous escape. When the sleigh, one of those peculiar to the French habitues, went into the water, she leaped from it upon a broken cake of ice. She saw, to her horror, father, nutther, brother, and sister swent beneath mother, brother, and sister swept beneatl the ice, while she, drifting to the solid sheet, was cast upon it, little knowing, thinking, or perhaps caring of her miouse, who, of course, started for the scene of the disaster, but on their arrival a blue hipple on the surface of the water was the only answer they received to their inquiry. Down among the dark waters were those with whom she had every the of relation-hip, and who were her only friends and support. She is a most interesting child, and tells the fearful story with interesting, simple sanieness, and yet does not realize the full extent of her loss.

The accident is one of the most heartrendering on record. Of course it is impossible to even attempt to recover the bodies, and it is doubtful whether they will even be. The only surviver is in the

All soils, to be productive, must consist of a suitable proportion of organic matter; these pro-portious we find different soils, varying from one-half to 76 per cent of their whole weight. With either more or less proportion they cease to be productive, and need an admixture to bring them in to profitable cultivation. Different crops will flourish upon land containing differ ent proportions of organic matter; thus barley requiring a larger per cent than rye or oats, and wheat a still larger per cent, than barley. The presence of organ-ic matter alone in a soil is not sufficient to Inctive soil. Soils in the same vicinity may each contain nearly, or quite, the same per cent and yet one will be productive and the other barren; the barren one being made so by the poisonous, dead inorganic matter contained therein. The earthy part of soils, when free from water, contains and this consists principally of silica, alumina, and lime. What is denominated a sandy soil is one in which silicious sand predominates. A calcareous one is where arbonate of lime is found in considerable abundance, as in some chalk and lime stone districts. Alumina, when in large proportion of the soil, constitutes a clay greater or less tenacity. Neither of these three substances often occur in quantities, pure, sufficient to form a superficial covering to any extent of the earth's surface. The three foregoing substances are generally found in soils in a state of chanical mixture, that is, in a state in and carbonate of lime soils are always so but in clays the silies and alumina are mostly in a state of chemical combination. A clay loam differs from a clay, in that a preportion of fine sand may be washed out, amounting to from 15 to 30 per cent, this sand and clay forming a mechanical mixture; this admixture of sand is what gives it its more friable nature. When a loamy soil is washed, it denoits from 31 to 60 per cent of sand; a deposits from 30 to 60 per cent. of sand; a sandy loam from 60 to 90 per cent.; and a sandy soil contains no more than 10 per cent. of clay. Soils where lime is found in greater than 5, and does not exceed 2) pe portion of clay it contains, were it free of lime, would place it. Calcareons soils are those in which the proportion of lime exceeds 20 per cent, and are distinguished as the last. the subsoil, which often has a remarkable influence upon the growth of any crop in the soil above it. This andsoil sometimes cousists of a nixture of the general consti-tuents of soils, but naturally different from the surface—sometimes a clay underlies a sand or other light soil, a hard-pan under-lies a loam often, etc. The upper, or surface soil, serves as a medium in which plants fix their roots; here they grow and die. This soil consists of a layer varying depth from a few inches to many fee Plants rarely extend their roots through the soil into the subsoil, and vegetable matter is still more rarely brried therein but the rains or water pass through the per soil, dissolving out some of the vege icquently contains these substances in greater or less quantities There is a lir gasic matter in the earth layers. The tharacteristics, then, of a soil are, that is contains more organic matter in a state of ing mass, that it is nearly nnaffected by any changes which the atmosphere culture, or vegetation, as agents, have produced up-on the soils above. Underlying most parts of the surface of the earth we find rocks, granual crumbing of rocks, together with such vegetable matter in decomposition as may have been produced on it, or other matter washed down from higher sources. By knowing the kind of rocks that the soil rests upon, we may judge of the soil, as it usually partakes more or less of the nature of the rock, nnless it be of drift formation. As before intimated, underneath he surface of loose or drifte l'matters are rocks. Some of these are what are called stratified rocks, from being formed in layers or beds called strate of very nn thick. rs or beds, called strata, of varying thick ss, others, as the gravites, trup. etc., unstratified or solid rock, being in a id mass instead of in layers. As these strata often lie in different positions— sometimes flat, at others inclined, the soil overlying varies with the strata on which rests, partaking of the natural chara argely upon its geological structure, it shows how much importance a previous according of that structure is in enabling as to determine the nature of the soil that is found in such locality. It also acts in determining the effects of special fertilizers applied, whereas, when applied without any knowledge of the requirements of the soil, they are often condemned as worth-less by those who use them, when perhaps in a different locality they produce the best results. So in the growth of crops, one soil is possible fitted. one soil is peculiarly fitted to raise a given crop: another, which appears to the gener-al view equally as good, will not produce

Iron Molders' Strike-Card from Bridgeford & Co. LOUISVILLE, Feb. 9, 1867. To the Editors of the Louisville Democrat: GENTLEMEN-In the issues of the Journal of the 7th and 9th insts., articles appeared in regard to the strike among our polders, which are without foundation in every respect. The facts in the case are briefly these: For several years past, the stove founders here have been under the exclusive control of an organization called the "Molders' Union Association," the ployers the number of apprentices to be employed in their establishment, and the price of every piece of work made in their shops. Any appeal from their decision would result only in a strike, thereby compelling their employers to submit to their odious and arbitrary enactments, or close their shops until they could procure other hands, a task by no means an easy one, owing to the great demand for labor of this character. Among other unjust demands made by this association here, was that of an advance of from 20 to 25 per cent. On the price paid for the same work in advance of from 20 to 25 per cent, on the price paid for the same work in Cincinnati and St. Louis, and an advance over the prices paid in Troy and Albany, N. Y., of fully 75 per cent, we, of course, having to coupete with Cincinnati and Saint Louis in the price of our goods or let the trade go to those cities. During this state of affairs the attention of the Molders' Union was remeatedly directed to the discountaries. eted to the discrimi ployers and employes. About six or aeven months since, after many fruitless efforts, we succeeded in having the difference reduced about ten per cent., and, considering the men with whom we had to deal, we were fortunate in having this concession made. Having accomplished this much, we determined to let the matter rest for a time hoping, that efforts, we succeeded in having the difference reduced about ten per cent., and, considering the men with whom we had to deal, we were forinnate in having this concession made. Having accomplished this much, we determined to let the matter rest for a time, hoping that after further consideration, the members of the Molders' Union would, without any other effort on our part, place us on an equality with our sister cities in regard to prices. This we felt they were well able to do, for let it be borne in mind that a good molder was capable of making from fifty to seventy dollars per week, but in this we were deceived. As is our usual custom, we closed our foundery on the Saturday preceding Christmas, with the expectation of resuming operations immediately after New Year. During the following week we sent in a communication to the Molders' Union, asking them, in view of the scarcity of money and the very small profits realized on goods of our manufacture, to place us on an equal footing with Cincinnalit, thereby enabling us to sell at as low rates as e could be obtained in that city place us on an equal footing with Cincinmail, thereby enabling us to sell at as low rates as could be obtained in that city without loss to correctives. Their answer to this communication, now in our possecsion, says, "the Union has resolved not to adopt the prices paid in Cincinnati," and this was the only satisfaction we could obtain from a class of men who profess to be working to build up the interest of Louiswills. We stated to the committee who handed us this answer that we now insulle. We stated to the committee who handed us this answer that we now intended to cut loose from the Union and run our shop under the best arrangement that sould be made. We immediately advertised for apprentices and put quite a number of them to work, upon which the Molders' Union, believing that perhaps we were in earnest about the matter, graciovsly consented to allow any of its members who might feel disposed, to commence work for us at Coucinuati prices. They also appointed a committee to wait upon us and see y a compromise of the disficulty could not be made. Their concessions, however, cause too late, as the apprentices were bound by indentures to us for three years, and room could only be made for members belonging to the association by discharging the young men who had in good faith eutered into an obligation to work for us during a period of three years. This, of course, in honor, we could not do. We have now nearly forty apprendices, and quite a number of journeymen molders, and the "biblity to employ and nav a few contingencies. A number of landed proposition and the "biblity to employ and nav a few contingencies. A number of landed proposition and the "biblity to employ and nav a few contingencies. A number of landed proposition and the "biblity to employ and nav a few contingencies." a number of journeymen molders, and the "ability to employ and pay a few more," Since we resumed operations, the the "ability to employ and pay a few more." Since we resumed operations, the members of the Union have, by threats and bribes, endgavored to induce men to leave one employ, in many cases ofering them one hundred dollars to leave the city, or, if they wished to remain here, to pay their board and all expenses, on the sole condition that they will not work for us. So bitter have they become toward the men now in our employ, that the assistance of the police has, on several occasions, been called into requisition, the worthy chief, Mr. Kaye, adopting prompt and efficient measures to quell the threatened ontbreak. In conclusion, we would say that we are determined to protect, at all hazards, the men who have come to our assistance, and, if necessary, will spend twenty-five thousand dollars, in order that we may chousand dollars, in order that we may control our own agairs; and further, demonstrate our "ability," not only to employ our former number of hands, but also to contend successfully with that formadable organization known as the "Iron Molders' international Union."
